

Lithography Of Torrance Man Shown

Connor Everts of 4507 Spencer Ave., Torrance, is among artists of major importance whose work in stone lithography is included in the current exhibition from Tamarind Workshop now in the Art Galleries of the University of California at Los Angeles.

The exhibition, comprised of 138 original prints created on fellowships at Tamarind (Los Angeles) by 34 artists from 13 states and three foreign countries, marks the midway milestone under a three-year grant from the Ford Foundation's Program in Humanities and the Arts "to restore the art of lithography to the United States."

The Everts' lithograph in the exhibition is titled: "Execution."

The establishment of Tamarind as a non-profit center to train artisans and initiate artists into the techniques of lithography from stone, the art beloved of Toulouse-Lautrec and the American George Bellows, came about through the necessity of fine artist June Wayne to go to Paris in order to create a series of lithographs for the poems of John Donne.

Following completion of her own artistic project, she developed the plan which resulted in the grant from the Ford Foundation and under which Tamarind now functions. The initial exhibit of lithographs from Tamarind, when it closes at UCLA on February 11, is scheduled for a two-year national tour of museums, as has been accorded such other important exhibitions as Picasso, Richard Neutra, Grunwald Graphic Arts, organized at UCLA's Galleries by Frederick E. Wight, director of the Galleries.

Los Angeles Police Get New Drunk Test Device

The "balloon test" is no longer the only chemical device used to measure the blood alcohol content of accident-involved intoxicated drivers in Los Angeles.

The Breathalyzer, a new instrument which will save thousands of dollars annually for the city's taxpayers, has been placed in operation, according to Deputy Chief H. W. Sullivan, commander of the Los Angeles Police Department's Traffic Bureau.

The LAPD now has eight Breathalyzer units in service, and lists two reasons for the changeover.

1. WHILE THE balloon test (Intoximeter) requires laboratory analysis to obtain precise evidence for the court, an accurate result from a Breathalyzer test is immediately available without additional laboratory costs.

2. The same instrument can be used for an unlimited number of tests at a cost of 70 cents per suspect, as opposed to the balloon test which is returned to the manufacturer for recharging at a cost of $3 after each test.

THE Breathalyzer, like the balloon test, serves to protect the innocent as well as to convict the guilty. When a driver's symptoms of apparent intoxication are actually due to an obscure illness or are the result of an accident, these instruments quickly reveal his need for medical attention.

The LAPD has had a pilot program of Breathalyzer testing under way for over a year. All personnel who will administer tests have been thoroughly trained in the use of the instruments under the supervision of the LAPD's Chief Forensic Chemist Ray Pinker and Capt. S. E. Mills, commander of Accident Investigation Division.

THE BREATHALYZER, with its dials, indicator pointers, and knobs looks complex, but its operation is really simple, Chief Sullivan pointed out. The instruments are small enough to be carried in police cars but at present they are placed in divisional police headquarters in the central area where bookings are made and also in Main and Central Jails and Central Receiving Hospital. Their use will later be expanded to the Harbor, West Los Angeles, and San Fernando Valley areas.

The LAPD has verified the accuracy of the Breathalyzer by many comparisons with laboratory analysis of blood containing alcohol, and its readings have been accepted by the courts, Chief Sullivan said. The basic principle of the Breathalyzer is that the breath is bubbled through a chemical solution which changes color in proportion to the amount of alcohol present. This change is measured photo-electrically against a comparison solution and the change is registered on a scale in terms of percentage of blood alcohol.
